

3 tables are created, the article table should implement a unique ID, since the title can change in some cases, the same was applied for the category table. I assumed that an article has only one category, so a foreign key in the article table is implemented. As for the links to the article, a many-to-many table was implemented, in order to store just the indexes of the articles that are linked (in a tuple way)